Brayan Geovanni lives with his parents, one brother and one sister. His parents struggle to provide for the family. His father is a water carrier and his mother is unemployed. Despite their efforts, it is difficult to meet the family's needs.

Brayan Geovanni is growing up in an agricultural community in a tropical, mountainous region of El Salvador. In this community, disciplining with violence is culturally acceptable within families, and children are vulnerable to exploitation and neglect. When families struggle with poverty, kids sometimes have to leave school to work. Getting access to healthcare and education proves challenging due to cost and distance, and some rural families lack basic services like running water and electricity. Without regular healthcare and nutritious diets, kids suffer from malnutrition. Your sponsorship will help empower children and families, especially the most vulnerable, to create better futures.

Brayan Geovanni is not in school at this time because the child is still too young. He helps at home by being good. He likes to play. He is in satisfactory health.

Your sponsorship commitment will help Brayan Geovanni and his community get better access to resources and support that will empower them to break the cycle of poverty. Communities will be equipped to prepare and plan for natural disasters like earthquakes. Parents will gain better knowledge about nutrition and healthcare for their young kids, helping fight malnutrition. Clean water and sanitation facilities will be more accessible in homes, schools, and churches, and vulnerable families will be supported through trainings and community measures that uphold kids' rights. Through it all, staff will show God's love as we care for the most vulnerable children and families.

Leslieth lives with her parents and has no brothers or sisters. Her parents struggle to provide for the family. Her father is a teacher and her mother is unemployed. Despite their efforts, it is difficult to meet the family's needs.

Leslieth is growing up in a small city; it's a warm, mountainous region where people mainly earn a living through farming crops like corn or coffee, raising cattle, or running small businesses. Nearly one in three teenagers say they go to bed hungry, and many families have lost their livelihoods during the economic crisis caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. Kids suffer from preventable diseases, caused in part by a lack of access to clean water and proper sanitation facilities. As well, family structures aren't strong, and children face violence or abuse at the hands of relatives. Kids sometimes have to drop out of school to work and help make ends meet, and those who do stay in school often don't graduate with good reading skills. More than half of teenagers don't take part in any vocational or financial training, which leaves them with few resources to get good jobs or create savings for their futures.

Leslieth is not yet in school at this time. She helps at home by being good. She likes to play. She is in satisfactory health.

Your sponsorship commitment will help Leslieth and her family get better access to healthcare and knowledge about practices that will keep them all in better health. Families will be supported with clean water as well as farming tools so they can boost their incomes. Schools, parents, and teachers will collaborate to make sure students at every level, from preschool to high school, get the right resources to help them learn and succeed. We'll join churches in their work to teach children and youth good life skills and equip parents with awareness about children's rights along with methods for creating loving homes.

Erlin Caleb lives with his parents and has no brothers or sisters. His parents struggle to provide for the family. His father is a farm laborer and his mother is unemployed. Despite their efforts, it is difficult to meet the family's needs.

Erlin Caleb is living in a poor village in the Latin American country of Honduras. Homes are made of sun-dried bricks with tile roofs and dirt floors. Beans and rice are staples of their diet, but sometimes families can get corn, eggs and locally grown fruit or vegetables. In forested regions the climate is hot and humid in the summer and cold in the winter. Weather in the south is warm and dry all year.

Erlin Caleb is not in school at this time because the child is still too young. He helps at home by being good. He likes to play with toy cars. He is in satisfactory health.

Your sponsorship commitment will help provide Erlin Caleb and his community with access to clean water to prevent diseases, as well as improved school curricula, teacher training, and tutoring for children. Your faithful support will also provide families with education in proper nutrition, and will establish new gardens, fish ponds, and beehives to provide healthy food choices. And through our partnership with local churches, children will learn about the surpassing love of Jesus Christ.

Magaly Griselda is growing up in a humid, mountainous region of northeastern Guatemala that's been affected by prolonged drought in recent years. It's one of the poorest areas in Guatemala, with more than eight in 10 people living in poverty. Families rely on agriculture for food and income, but soil erosion and poor land management make it difficult for them to grow enough to provide for their families. Children and families don't have access to clean water, which contributes to poor health, and many kids are malnourished. Because of widespread poverty, children often must work to help make ends meet instead of attending school, and schools are under-resourced for students' needs. The majority of people who live here are Indigenous people groups, but historic discrimination toward them means they're widely excluded from resources that could empower them to lift themselves out of poverty.

Magaly Griselda is not in school at this time because the child is still too young. She helps at home by being good. She likes to play with musical rattles. She is in satisfactory health.

Your sponsorship commitment will help Magaly Griselda and her community get better access to resources and support that will empower them to break the cycle of poverty. Rural families will get access to lasting clean water, to help prevent illness. Families will get trainings in business skills and economic development, increasing their ability to provide for their basic needs. We'll help equip the community to provide consistent access to quality education and healthcare for kids. Through it all, staff will show God's love as we care for the most vulnerable children and families.
